

Digi Teachers Working Online Toolkit

Blog as a joint portfolio

WHAT: Blogger or Wordpress blog as a learning portfolio for a group

WHY: The students learn

- to report their work and progress
- to comment each other's texts.

WHO: Suitable for students with average digital skills. Can be used in classroom, in distance teaching and during on-the-job learning.

WHAT: The students can report their tasks and progress as blog posts. It is possible to use both pictures and text. The teacher can give instructions and assignments online. Everybody can comment each other's posts. Even other teachers or people at the workplace can read the blog and be aware of the assignments. It is possible to hide the blog from other people and share the material only between the students and the teacher. There can be several subpages for different topics.

WHICH: When using Blogger, you will need Google accounts. If you have GSE in your organisation, there may be restrictions for minors. When using Wordpress, there are no similar age limits. It is easiest to use blogs with a computer.
